SEVERAL WISHES.

I wish I had a thousand tongues
To sing my lady's praise;
I wish I had a thousand eyes
To see her winning ways;
I wish I had a thousand banks,
With all their legal tender—
A thousand banks that I might buy
Rich presents for to send her;
I wish I had a thousand hearts
To squander love upon her;
And I wish I had a thousand swords
To kill the man who won her.

Mary Hallett—Widow and Wife.

JAMES Hallett and Abner Wilcox had been lifelong friends; they had courted the same girl, but Mary Crowell had chosen James in preference to Abner. The two men were sailors and shipmates on a small fishing schooner. After the usual cruise to the Banks they were homeward bound one dark, squally night when Abner was ordered to perform a certain duty which resulted in the supposed death of James. Abner went home, carried the sad news to Mary Hallett and was accused by her of being a murderer.

The sloop-of-war Pilgrim had sailed from Boston for South America, and was running out the south channel with a brisk north-west wind and a smooth sea. It was the morning watch. The lookouts had been called in, the running lights extinguished, a man sent to the mast-head, and Lieutenant Parker, the officer of the deck, brisk, alert and commanding, was issuing his orders, trimming sail and preparing to give the ship her morning bath and toilet. Suddenly from the mast-head came the hail.

"On deck there!"

"What is it?" from the officer.

"Something in the water off the starboard bow, sir."

"Can you make it out?"

"Not yet, sir."

"Quartermaster, aloft with a glass."

And soon the petty officer was on the foreyard, gazing intently into the sea with is binocular. "Man on a ladder, sir," hailed the quartermaster.

"Watch, shorten sail," shouted the officer. "Life-boat's, crew away. Orderly, call the captain. Royal clewlines—flying-jib down haul—lively, my lads!—in light sails—clew garnets and buntlines—up courses—lee after braces—brace up aft—head yards square—fly the jib-sheets—down helm;" and the Pilgrim lay to with her head yards aback, and the boat was soon in the water pulling for a white object on the lee bow. Returning quickly, a man was passed up the side, and down to the sick bay, where the surgeon was ready for him. Apparently dead, yet all means of resuscitation were applied, and at last faint signs of life showed, yet, when fully restored, his mind seemed wandering, and Dr. Turner was puzzled for the time, but waited for more developments. Under opiates the patient slept.

The Pilgrim filled away on her course, and under all sail made a straight wake for the north-east trades, The able physician could not make out the case of his patient. A severe bruise was on the side of his head and face, but there seemed a mental aberration and an inability to answer questions intelligently. When asked his name he answered, "Mary Crowell." Asked how he came in the water, he replied, "Stay-sail." To the question where he lived, he said, "Tack ship." His bodily strength returned somewhat, but his mind was weak and wavering, and his memory too dim to be of any use.

In due time the Pilgrim returned to Rio Janeiro. The unknown waif picked up at sea was turned over to the care of the American consul, and by him placed in the hospital. He was quiet and harmless, gave very little trouble, but his reason seemed lost. The charming climate and surroundings had a good effect upon the bodily health of the young man. From the windows of the hospital he could see the magnificent harbor, and the ships lying at anchor there. These seemed to interest him, but he always appeared to be searching for something among them that he could not find. A tawny, silky beard grew upon his face, his form filled out, and but for the vacant expression in his eyes, he was all that manly beauty and symmetry of form could express. One day a beautiful little schooner came in from sea. Her snowy sails would have revealed her nationality at once, even if the starry flag had not flown from her peak, She seemed to interest the hapless patient greatly. When just in front of the hospital she gracefully tacked, and at the proper moment he shouted, "Draw away," and as the jib swung across the deck he was greatly excited and seemed to be struggling with some memory, but could not concentrate his mind upon it. He watched the little vessel until she anchored, and would look at her for hours while she remained in the harbor, but at last she went away, and he saw her no more.

Abner Wilcox grew pale and thin. He visited a grave lawyer in the city, and told him his sad story. He made his will, leaving his little belongings to Mary and the children, and then he went to sea with a great sadness in his heart, and a desire for death and rest. The bark, Pursuit, outward-bound for San Francisco, was struck by a pampero off the Rio de la Plata, and dismasted. When the gale abated, jurymasts were rigged, and the captain was able to get his ship into Rio Janeiro for repairs. One of the crew had been severely injured in the disaster, and was sent to the hospital upon the arrival of the ship. On the succeeding Sunday Abner Wilcox, seaman on this vessel, asked permission to visit his shipmate at the hospital, and receiving it, went on shore. He wandered about the beautiful city, visiting the objects of interest, and viewing the splendid scenery of the vicinity, and when the visiting hour arrived, presented himself at the entrance and was admitted.

The injured shipmate was rapidly improving under the skillful care of the surgeon in charge, and Abner contributed to his comfort as he could, and was about to leave the place, when turning, he encountered a face and form that would never be effaced from his memory. Pressing his hands to his heart, struggling for breath, he murmured, "James Hallett," and fell fainting on the floor. When he recovered, kind people were about him, and were ministering to him. He was bewildered for a moment, but standing near was a form that brought back recollection, and he covered his face with his hands, and thankful tears fell from his eyes, and grateful prayers rose from his heart. James Hallett's face wore a troubled and perplexed look. His hand was pressed to his head. He watched Abner closely, and refused to leave the room. The latter slowly arose and approached him.

"James," said he, "don't you know me?"

Still the strange look of perplexity was in the troubled eyes.

The surgeon then gave Abner a short history of this case that had perplexed them so much, and with a look of intense pity in his eyes, Abner Wilcox vowed in his heart that his should be the task to restore his old friend to life and light and love again. He told the surgeon the strange story, and that intelligent officer saw at once the best hope for the afflicted and bewildered man.

"James Hallett," said Abner, slowly and distinctly, "I am your old friend Abner Wilcox. Don't you remember me?"

The vacant eyes brightened a little, but the look of trouble remained.

"James," continued his friend, "have you forgotten Mary and the children, and the little home in Wellfleet? Have you no recollection of the schooner Matchless, in which we were fishing together? Do you not remember one dark night we were beating up for Pollock Rip, and you went aloft to furl the stay sail, and as you were coming down we tacked ship, and—"

Here the drooping head was raised, the vacant eyes flashed fire, and James shouted: "Hold on that jib-sheet, Abner; my foot is caught," and throwing up his arms, and shrinking as though fearful of a blow, he fell heavily on the floor.

They raised him, applied restoratives, and shortly after he slowly opened his eyes. All stood back but Abner Wilcox.

"Hello, Abner," said he, raising himself on his elbow, "have I been asleep long? Is it my watch? Why, how is this? What place is this? How did I get here? Where is the schooner and the skipper?"

"Gently, Jimmy," said his friend, "we will talk it all over some other time. You have been sick for a while."

"Nonsense, boy!" said James, "I am all right. Why, I feel splendid. I will get up and look around a little, and you shall tell me all about it."

And then the whole story was told James.

"And the wife and the children?"

They were well, but mourning him as dead and no way of getting the news to them.

His impatience knew no bounds. He must fly to them at once—at once.

Christmas Eve had come—the time when all Christians are glad at heart. When the cattle kneel in their stalls, and worship the star of Bethlehem the radiant emblem of hope to a dying race. The land was aglow with the charm of the season. Happy parents and happier children rejoiced and were exceeding glad for a regenerated race and a loving ransom freely paid. A light twinkled in a little cottage on Cape Cod. A sad-eyed widow held her children to her heart and wept, as she told them of the father that was no more, and then more calmly of the glorious hope that the season gave of a blessed meeting with him beyond the stars.

Toward the feeble light two men hastened. One pressed impatiently on in a evance of the other who toiled along with quick, gasping breath, and his hand pressed to his heart. A look of pain was on his face but he made no sign, and hurried on in the footsteps of him who had gone before. It was a glorious night. No cloud obscured the brilliancy of the northern constellations. A light fall of snow had covered the earth out of sight and added a luminous glow to the scene.

"James," said the rearmost man, "do not linger for me. Press on, to give them the glad surprise that your coming will be. I have no place there. I will come in later."

"Nonsense, Abner," said James; "the truest and most faithful friend I ever had shall share my joy this night. Come with me."

"I will follow, James; go you on at once."

"Mamma," said little Minnie, "is God glad to-night that people are so happy?"

"My child, we must be certain that he is, and also that he grieves with those who are sorrowful."

"Will my dear papa know in heaven that we miss him to-night, mamma?"

"We must believe so, my darling."

"Yes," said a strong voice from the door, "but you will mourn no more, my darlings, for the dead is alive again, and I am here."

To picture the scene that followed, with its precious emotions, is not for my pen. It was a Christmas Eve full of sacred joy and perfect love.

After a time James said, "Why, where is Abner?"

A cloud came over the brow of the happy wife, and she asked: "Why, my dear husband, what do we want of him? We are happy enough without strangers to-night."

"Mary, you do not know," said he. "You would never have had me back, if it were not for him. I must seek for him."

They had not far to look; for, having finished the task that had been marked out for him by the bereaved wife—having found the one who was lost, and restored him to the arms of those who loved him best—he was lying peacefully on the snow, with a smile on his worn face, for Abner Wilcox, seaman, fisherman, and gentleman, was dead.—C. H. Rockwell, U. S. N. in Harper's Weekly.

NEARLY MARRIED.

BUT THE RIGHT MAN TURNED UP IN THE NICK OF TIME.

To tell the truth, I was "cotton dry," and I slipped up to the side of a German studio, for it was Sunday, and rapped. The door was opened by a portly gentleman in a white apron, who shook my hand with every evidence of delight and ushered me into the back room of the studio. Rosy-cheeked German girls sat around the room, and a dozen men dressed in the gray uniform of the Schuetzen Corps were standing around a keg of beer, filling their glasses and emptying them down their throats as if for a wager.

I was introduced to everybody in the room, and was wondering what it all meant, when the door leading to the hall opened and a tall, handsome young lady walked in, attended by two girls, all dressed in white. The tall one towered fully a foot above me. She was being heaped with congratulations (my imperfect knowledge of German allowed me to understand;) and then the white-aproned gentleman led her toward me and introduced her to me. I simply bowed, for he had muttered the words of the introduction in German, but I said nothing, nor had I said a word since I entered the place.

The girl took my arm and led me to a seat. Then she gave me a kiss with a smack that sounded like a miniature clap of thunder. I was shocked, not at the kiss, but at the girl's audacity. Everybody giggled and she began to talk to me in German. I could not understand her, so I nodded and kept on nodding until two immense mugs of beer were sent in. She finished her mug before I got through with mine, and then a band, consisting of three German musicians, struck up a waltz. My companion and I joined in the dance.

After several dances a tall, solemn-faced man was ushered into the room. He fixed his eagle eye on me, and I began to think that the mistake as to my identity, which I suspected my entertainers were laboring under, was discovered; but he only smiled and shook hands with me.

I was enjoying myself hugely. I knew that these folks mistook me for somebody else, but I could not for the life of me clear up the mistake, so I went on chuckling inwardly until the white-aproned gentleman beckoned me and my companion toward him. We arose together and the man with the eagle eye planted himself before us. He began fumbling in his coat-tail pocket for something, and at the same moment there was a rap at the door. In bounced a young fellow about as tall as myself, with a bouquet in his bottonhole as big as a plate. He looked at me, and the people looked from one to the other of us. Then I felt myself caught from behind, and I was run out through the yard and thrown through the door into the street.

I was angry, but could not help laughing. I came to the conclusion that the last comer was the young man whom I had been mistaken for. The next night I called on the studio-keeper to solve the mystery. He began laughing when he saw me, and it was some minutes before he recovered himself. Then he said:

"I vould nefer haf known it. You vas de young mans dat we take for Carl las' night. Hah! hah! dot vos funny. Carl he haf not sawn Barbara ober yet she vas one shmall geli. His foder und her foder dey make up dot dey got merried. Carl he go on Milvaukee, but Barbara she stay home.

"Barbara she my cousin, las' veek she come here. I send to Carl. He wrote he come las' nacht und marry her. We tink you Carl. We tink you say nodding because you vas fraid. You can not talk Deutsche?"

"No."

"I tought not. It's all arecht now; Carl he laugh, Barbara laugh. You like to see dem?"

I replied "No," and then we drank their health and enjoyed another good laugh. It was the narrowest escape, though, I ever had from being married.—Denver Times.

The Elkton Appeal, the staunchest Republican paper of Cecil county, speaks its mind in the following strain:

"Enough, however, is known to disgust and sicken honorable Republicans. The party has been trampled under foot by these office-holders, hunters and spoilsmen. Never before in the history of the party has it been so utterly disgraced, and as far as this state is concerned it exists only in name. The party has been wrecked in a struggle for Federal patronage, and now will present no opposition whatever to the continued supremacy of the Democratic party. It now lies prostrate, and will never be revived and made to stand erect until the organization from Garrett to Somerset county is wrested from the hands of spoilsmen and office-hunters."

SUNOL—2.08 1-4.

THE REASON SHE AND MAUD S., ARE PHENOMENALLY FAST.

SENATOR STANFORD AND ROBERT BONNER INBREED TO RUNNING STOCK AND ARE ARDENT ADVOCATES OF THE PRINCIPLE.

When Ten Broeck, at Louisville, May 24, 1877, ran a mile in 1.39¼, the world, as descried by the thoroughbred turfites, held up their hands and marvelled.

Year after year various horses tried to break it, until Racine, in 1890, at Chicago—another of Senator Stanford's horses—clipped a bit off the record, and made it read 1.39½, and then Raveloe, over the straight track at Monmouth, went Racine a fraction better, and it stood at 1.39¼. On the 28th of August of that same year the mighty Salvator ran a mile against Ten Broeck's famous record in 1.35½; but this was over a perfectly straight track, so that it is doubtful whether, taking everything well into consideration, Salvator's feat is in any sense a greater one than Ten Broeck's. As a matter of fact, at equal weights, the latter's time has never been equalled over an oval track to this day.

A precisely analogous question now arises in reference to Sunol's great performance to beat Maud S's time of 2 08¼. Sunol was bred by Senator Stanford, of California, being by the immortal Electioneer out of Waxana, she by General Benton out of Waxy—a thoroughbred mare by the famous Lexington out of Grey Eagle. Electioneer was by Hambletonian out of Green Mountain Maid, she by Henry Clay.

This is the pedigree as Senator Stanford gives it, but it is disputed by Mr. Wallace in the Trotting Register, who claims that Waxy was not a racing-bred mare, although he is willing to concede that she had some racing blood in her veins, for it is undisputed that she was the dam of that thoroughly good race-mare Alpha, by imp. Hercules. Electioneer, Sunol's sire, was bred at Stony Ford, New York, and General Benton was also bred in this state.

The point disputed by Mr. Wallace is a very important one, as it bears directly upon the amount of thoroughbred blood in Sunol's breeding. It has always been one of Senator Stanford's theories to breed up very closely to the thoroughbred cross, believing that it gets "game," speed, and endurance. It would seem from the result in Sunol's case that this theory had been triumphantly asserted.

Be this point as it may, Sunol has always been a wonder—a source of pride to her breeder, Senator Stanford, her trainer and driver, Charles Marvin, and her present owner, Robert Bonner, who purchased her from the Senator last year for $41,000, but has allowed her to remain in California at Marvin's request. At two years old Sunol reduced Wildflower's record from 2 21, which had stood for six years, to 2.18; then as a three-year-old she completely "smashed" Jay-Eye-See's five-year-old record of 2.10¾ down to 2.10½, which considering the difference in age, may be accounted about the greatest of all Sunol's record-breaking.

In this last effort against time she trotted the first quarter in 31½ seconds, went to the half in 1.04 flat, the three-quarters in 1.37, and home, strong and easy, in 2.08¼. An analysis of this shows that the last quarter was the fastest of all, and the third quarter the slowest of all four. Sunol is a mare of superb conformation, well muscled all over, with a long-striding, frictionless action which is most deceptive to the eye of the observer. As to the question of tracks, there can be no reasonable doubt that Sunol possessed great advantage over Maud S. in having to make her record over the "kite-shaped" track at Stockton.

This is not said to belittle her performance, as that is a great one under any circumstances; but there is more difference than a half-second in favor of the "kite shaped" over the old circular or oval tracks. In the former there are practically but two corners to turn, and it has besides two long straight stretches, which allows the horse free swing, and does not compel the driver, as when trotting around the old track, to slow down to make the turns safely; and what is most important, the home stretch on the "kite-shaped" is twice the distance straight away over the circular track, and allows a greater and freer burst for the wire. But when it is stated that Sunol has trotted a half-mile in 1.02½, it must be conceded that, all question of track cast aside, Sunol is one of the greatest trotting mares ever bred; yet until she goes a full mile over a circular track, and lowers or or equals Maud S's time of 2.08¼ made in 1885, the daughter of Harold and Miss Russell will remain queen of the trotting turf.

Mr. Bonner is to be congratulated upon possessing two such peerless equine stars, and it is all the more admirable it should be so, as their ownership is not associated with any speculative purpose. For the champions of the thoroughbred blood in the trotter this is an additional victory. First, we had Maud S., descended from imp. Messenger, Boston, a great four miler thoroughbred. imp, Diomed, winner of the first Derby; and now Sunol to rival her speed, also closely inbred to the running stock. Both Mr. Bonner and Senator Stanford are ardent advocates of this principle, and are giving full scope to it in breeding their trotters.—Harper's Weekly.

THE MODEL PEACH FARM OF MARYLAND IS IN THE MIDDLE OF THE CHESAPEAKE.

In the middle of Chesapeake Bay slightly to the east of the Gunpowder river's mouth, and eight miles from Tolchester and the same distance from Legoe's Point, lies Pool's Island, a spot long noted throughout the upper shores for its fertility, but of which the majority of people know little. Many know that excellent peaches are raised there, but very few people outside of those who deal in the luscious fruit know that nearly the entire island is a peach orchard, or that it is the model peach farm of Maryland. It is not so large as some of the big peach farms of Kent and Queen Anne's counties, many of which contain from thirty thousand to sixty thousand trees, but from the quality of the island fruit, and the manner in which the farm is conducted, it is said to be almost without a rival.

The island is long and narrow, much broader at its northern than at its southern end, and on its eastern side is indented with a pretty cove. It is nearly a mile and a-half long, with an average width of three-eighths of a mile, and contains about 280 acres. Many are the stirring incidents connected with the island's early history, when Claiborne was making things lively along the bay shores, but for the past half century or more it has been a quiet farm home. It was bought in 1808 by Peregrine Wethered, who for more than fifty years ran the place as a grain farm, raising crops that were the wonder and the admiration of the farmers all along the bay. Here were kept large numbers of slaves. Both before and after the war, whenever a colored farm hand in the bayside counties was questioned as to his strength and ability to work, the best recommendation he could give, and the one of which he was proudest, was "I've cut wheat on the island." This was usually enough to secure him employment.

There has been much conjecture as to the origin of the island, the general supposition being that is is of volcanic origin. Some think that it was formerly a portion of the mainland, but the character of the soil is entirely different from that of Harford or Kent counties, which are within a mile or two of it, and then again a chestnut or pine tree has never been known on the place, while both are abundant along the neighboring shores. The soil is a rich black loam, varying from eighteen inches to eight feet in depth, with a heavy clay sub-soil. It is so rich that the most abundant crops are produced to-day without the aid of fertilizers, none except the manure made on the place ever having been used on it in its hundred years of cultivation. Numerous wells of clear sparkling water are scattered about the island. The water also differs from that usually found along the bay, being soft instead of hard, resembling greatly that found on the high lands in the western counties.

Peaches were never grown in any quantities on the island until 1872, when Geo. Merett, who bought it from John Wethered, son of Peregrine Wethered, set out an orchard of over 6,000 trees. This began the place's reputation as a peach orchard, which has been kept up ever since. The island was bought in May, 1882, by Charles C. Homer, president of the Second National Bank of Baltimore, and John J. Masheter, of Ohio. The story of the purchase is rather a peculiar one. Mr. Masheter, who has the entire charge of the farm, was a farmer in Ohio, but came East and was associated with Mr. Homer in business in Baltimore. He went to the island one day on a fishing trip, and returning told Mr. Homer that he had found a piece of Iowa soil in Maryland and wanted it. The place was examined, its possibilities for peach culture recognized, and it was bought shortly afterward by Messrs. Homer and Masheter, and Mr. Masheter took charge. As many more trees as were then on the place were set out, extensive improvements were made from time to time, and the island was devoted to peach and sheep raising, in both of which branches of agriculture Mr. Masheter has been remarkably successful.

The orchard is peculiar in that it contains some of the largest peach trees known to fruit growers. The trunks of a great number of these are ten inches in diameter, while many run as high as fifteen and a few measure eighteen inches. These large trees have great spreading branches, and from one was taken, two or three seasons ago, twenty-seven boxes of choice fruit. This was only about two-thirds of the tree's yield, the remainder being lost by some branches breaking down from the weight of the fruit upon them, which fruit of course, did not ripen. The orchard is not remarkable so much for the quantity as for the quality of the fruit which is raised upon it, although in 1886 the yield approached 15,000 packages.

Several unsuccessful attempts have been made to secure a portion of the island for an excursion resort, but none have been successful as yet. On one end of the island is a beautiful grove, with a hard white beach stretching before it for half a mile or more. The timber here is of original growth, very large, and none of it has ever been cut.

e information that Senator
Delaware is ill. He is marked wn in the books of the President makers as a very strong dark horse in the Democratic field of possibilities.
He made a big reputation in the Senate in the tariff discussion and in the prolonged fight over the Federal Elections bill, called by the Democrats
the "Force bill." He was Senator
Gorman's chief lieutenant on that occasion, and the orator that was always put forward when the Democratic side of the Senate was seen to be in a tight place.

It is said that President Cleveland had him selected at one time for chief justice of the United States Supreme Court to fill the vacancy created by the death of Chief Justice Waite, but some political complications in Delaware caused Mr. Cleveland to change his mind. The story is that Mr. Cleveland first concluded to make Mr.
Carlisle, the Speaker of the House and now Senator from Kentucky, Mr.
Waite's successor, and when he was induced to change his mind he pitched on Senator Gray, whose course in the Senate had secured his admiration.
Mr. Gray is a great favorite on both sides of the Senate, and the wish of all who know him is that he will soon recover.

[The illness mentioned was a slight attack of colic two weeks ago. The Senator is now in good health. Ed. TRANSCRIPT.]

THE TRANSCRIPT has always been a representative newspaper, but we have extended its scope and this week present full correspondence from neighboring localities. This will be a regular feature and that it will be appreciated by our many readers there is no doubt.

QUAY CLAIMS that the result of the elections serve as a vindication for himself and Foraker feels encouraged thereby to oppose John Sherman for a seat in the United States Senate. When such characters as these are brought into prominence the results of the elections serve a bad end.

DELAWARE Democrats should now bend their efforts toward the elimination of the evils which have arisen from long continued power. That evils exist cannot be denied and the party being perfectly able to purify itself no time should be lost. An honest endeavor to nominate good men and to correct evil tendencies will do more to strengthen the party than any amount of sharp practice. It is the duty of the party to rise above factionalism and petty strife in order to preserve from desecration the honorable traditions and the idea of statehood which has heretofore characterized our government.

THE ELECTIONS held in thirteen States have resulted in a pronounced Democratic victory. The election of Russell in Massachusetts and of Boies in Iowa illustrates the fact that the Republican states of the past are not to be the Republican states of the future. Changes are taking place which no amount of political huckstering can prevent, and they are all from the Republican to the Democratic column. The people are aroused and under the wise provisions of the secret ballot system are voting conscientiously. The Democratic victory in New York is not more of a defeat for the Republican party than a condemnation of the acts of David B. Hill. The victory points to Grover Cleveland as the leader in the next Presidential election. It is distinctively a Cleveland victory. In Ohio McKinley is elected by less than the usual Republican majority in a state naturally Republican. Any other result would have been a great surprise. McKinley stood by the tariff barons so faithfully while in Congress that anything less than their support, financially and otherwise, would drive other men, equally able, from the service. In Pennsylvania Quay indorsed Bardsleyism by a heavy majority. In Maryland the Democrats have rolled up a good majority for the man who prevented the enactment of the Force Bill. The indications all point to Cleveland as the Democratic standard bearer next year, and to the probability of a revolt against tariff spoilation and Republican intolerance.

THE P. W. & B. Railroad Company has paid to State Treasurer Burnite the sum of $215,000, being the principal and interest of a first mortgage which the State held against part of the Delaware, Maryland and Virginia system. This money was loaned by the State to the Company which built the road some time in the seventies and in doing this the Legislature had for a precedent the loan, at an earlier date, of the credit of the State to the Junction and Breakwater road, to the extent of $400,000.

As securities for these sums the State held a first mortgage on each of the properties. Last winter the railroad people presented for the consideration of the Legislature a bill which would allow them to bond the roads, both of which are now in the hands of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, for any sum which they might deem advisable, and to then transfer to the State of Delaware a sufficient number of the bonds, at their par value, at four per cent., to cover the whole debt of $600,000. The bill met with great favor among the members of the Legislature and no newspaper in the State, except THE TRANSCRIPT, had the nerve to call a halt on a scheme which bade fair to cause the State to give up a first mortgage in exchange for a lot of bonds almost, if not entirely, worthless. THE TRANSCRIPT fought the matter to the end and thus caused to be saved to the people of Delaware the $215,000 which has just been paid in cash and influenced the Legislature to secure the balance of the debt by a first mortgage. Some of our contemporaries are now very much elated over the payment of this money but they did not raise the alarm which made the payment possible. THE TRANSCRIPT has set an example which should be followed by some of the greater papers of the State.

Episcopal Convocation.

The annual convocation of the Episcopal Diocese of Delaware was held in Trinity Church, Wilmington, beginning Tuesday evening. It ended last night. The Middletown delegates were Rev. J. Beers and H. A. Nowland. Misses Mary Price and Alice Wood were also in attendance.

Lawrence A. Subers of Chesapeake City, Md., is an incorporator of the Subers' Piano Company which has a capital stock of $250,000, and articles of incorporation for which are filed in the Camden county, N. J., clerk's office. George C. Coughlin, Norristown, Pa., and Samuel B. Coughlin, Burlington, N. J., are the other incorporators.

DEMOCRACY!

SEVEN STATES GIVE MAJORITIES OF THE RIGHT KIND.

FLOWER HAS 47,376 PLURALITY IN NEW YORK AND MASSACHUSETTS RE-ELECTS RUSSELL.—MARYLAND ELECTS BROWN, AND IOWA IS ALSO DEMOCRATIC.—THE RETURNS FROM OTHER STATES.

Tuesdays's elections resulted in Democratic victories in New York, Massachusetts, Iowa, New Jersey, Maryland, Mississippi and Virginia and Republican success in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Colorado and Nebraska.

NEW YORK.

Roswell P. Flower, Dem., is Governor-elect of New York. His plurality over Fassett, Rep., is estimated a 47,376. The Democrats have a majority in both houses of the Assembly for the first time in thirty years and this means a just reapportionment of the State's Legislative districts. Heretofore the districts have been so gerrymandered as to make it impossible, even with 100,000 majority in the state for Democrats to control the Assembly. Kernan and Hill are the only New York Democratic Senators for twenty years. Sheehan, Dem., is elected Lieutenant Governor over Vrooman, Rep., by 30,246 plurality.

MARYLAND.

Brown, Dem., is elected Governor over Vannort, and Higgins, Pro., by a majority of 30,156. The Legislature will stand 103 Democrats, 11 Republicans and 3 Fusionists on joint ballot. The Senate will have 22 Democrats and four Republicans; the latter are holding ever members. Eighty-one Democrats, 7 Republicans and 3 Fusionists will compose the House of Delegates. Smith, Dem., is elected Comptroller over McDonald, Rep., and Lavering, Pro., by 23,729 majority. Poe, Dem., is elected attorney general over Sharp, Rep., and Moulton, Pro., by 22,705 majority. The Fusionists carried Caroline county and elect Purnell, Johnson and William H. Dean to the House of Delegates. Chief Judge Briscoe, Dem., carries his judical circuit in Southern Maryland by over 1,300 majority, while in the fourth circuit, Western Maryland, Mr. Stake, Rep., associate judge, is elected by over 600 majority. Mr. Roberts was elected in Carroll, Howard and Anne Arunnel without opposition.

Returns of the vote on the constitutional amendments in the counties are meagre, but enough have been received to indicate the probable defeat of the third and the sixth. These relate to the equality of taxation and taxation of mortgages. The first, relating to the extension of the veto power, is adopted, and the other three are probably adopted.

MASSACHUSETTS.

With three small towns to hear from, Russell, Dem., is re-elected Governor over Allen, Rep., by a plurality of 6,913. The missing returns will not lower the plurality. The Republicans have elected the rest of the State ticket by about the same plurality, showing that Gov. Russell ran fully 14,000 votes ahead of his ticket. The Republicans have carried the Senate and House. The present returns give the Republicans 24 and the Democrats 16 in the Senate.

IOWA.

Governor Boies, Dem., is re-elected by nearly 10,000 majority over Wheeler, Rep. The balance of the Democratic State ticket is also probably elected, but by a reduced majority, 3,000 or 4,000. The Democrats have gained four and perhaps five Senators, which will give them a majority in that body or at least make it a tie, and if Mr. Bestow, Dem., is elected Lieutenant Governor he would have the casting vote.

OHIO.

McKinley, Rep., is the Governor-elect. His plurality over Campbell, Dem., is 18,000 and may exceed that figure. The Legislature will be Republican by at least 35 on joint ballot. The Prohibitionists polled 16,000 votes—a loss from last year of 7.000. The total vote is estimated at 700,000. The Legislature will elect a senator to succeed John Sherman.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Morrison, Rep., and Gregg, Rep., are elected State Treasurer and Auditor General respectively, by pluralities of 47,467 and 50,833. Tilden and Wright were the Democratic candidates. The proposition for a constitutional convention is overwhelmingly rejected; only ten counties in the State gave majorities in favor of it, and in the two counties from which complete figures have been received on the question there is a net majority of 154,590 against holding the convention.

VIRGINIA.

The Democrats elect thirty-nine of the forty members of the State Senate, and at least eighty-seven of the one hundred members of the House of Delegates. The indications are that not a colored man has been elected to either branch of the Legislature.

MISSISSIPPI.

The Democrats elect a Legislature and Walthall and George will be returned to the U. S. Senate.

OTHER RETURNS.

Colorado returns are coming in slowly and it is impossible to give exact figures. Judge Heim, Rep., will probably be elected Chief Justice by over 5,000. Despatches from sixty-five of the 106 counties of Kansas show that the people's party was successful in not more than six.

Reports from the Congressional election in South Dakota are slow in coming in, but enough has been received to indicate the certain election of Jolly, Rep., to Congress by a good vote.

The returns from Nebraska are meagre, but careful estimates give Post, Rep., candidate for Supreme Judge, 6,000 majority over Edgerton, Ind., people's.

Complete returns from Cook county, Ill., show that the entire Republican ticket is elected. The Republican candidates for County Commissioners in the Chicago districts received majorities varying from 7,000 to 14,000.

New Jersey elects seven Democratic Senators. The next Senate will stand 16 Democrats, 5 Republicans. The Democrats elect 41 Assemblymen and the Republicans 19. The Democratic majority on joint ballot will be 33.

Wanamaker's.

PHILADELPHIA, November 2, 1891.

The rare effects of colors in Silks that a week since were delighting everybody have not passed away. They are on the Transept shelves. No conjurer's word is needed to summon them. Your command will suffice.

Bengalines at $1.25. They were $2. Bengaline is the Poplin of the Silk stock. Silk like a Gros-grain with wool in the filling. You wouldn't find the wool without the telling. Some of the Novelties are crowding the Bengalines, and therefore we down the prices to a skipping level. Fifty evening shades and dark colors.

A wide choice. A great bargain.

Some of the most striking Costumes you see on Chestnut street are of Plaid and Velvet in combination—velvet sleeves very likely; sometimes Velvet revers.

Of course it needs a stylish Plaid to start with, the wilder the better—and there's wildness enough in the new crop Plaids to set a backwoodsman wondering. French, German, Scotch, English weavers have been racing each other to get up the most howling novelty in Plaided Dress Goods. All of them have succeeded famously. We've heaps of the newest stuffs from all the leading over-sea looms.

Here's a bold Plaid overshot with wide parti-colored chevron stripes; result one of the most remarkable kaleidascopic jumbles of squares and triangles and lozenges that ever figured in a plaid. The gay colors that play hide-and-seek among them give the last touches of elegance. Four agonies, $2.75 a yard.

Another of the untamed Plaid host is as rugged as the hills of its native land. Nubs (the big lumps in woven stuffs are "nubs" now) and flakes of lightness are scattered over the big, cluster-stripe squares as if fairies had been snow-balling it. $2 a yard, 43 inches.

Still another oddness is a two-toned Checker-board plaid with a sharp chevron angle to every square. $1.50, width 40 inches.

Angora Hair Plaids—figures formed by broad paths of fuzziness—are $1.50; width 40 inches.

Cashmere Plaids are in great variety, 75c, $1, $1.25.

Grace and beauty are their own justification. Hence this had to be a Long Garment season. The designers caught the symmetry of the flowing lines of cavaliers' and colonels' cloaks and capes, and with masterful skill made them tributary to the Wraps of the day. They conquered — of course they did.

The Queen's Own.

Advance guard and solid phalanx of the season's trade- dainty, stylish, durable; they come in plain cloths (surah lined) in heather mixed Scotch Cheviots and rough diagonals, plain colored, blue, black, tan and tobacco-brown, $18 to $25.

Military Overcoats with Capes.

Ideas by dozens. A trophy of to-day—for $13 a rough herring-bone light colored Scotch Cheviot. The range of prices is $13 to $28.75, and half the Chestnut street front is needed to show the line of samples.

English Box Reefers.

They begin with a marvel which sharp manufacturers cannot understand — fine soft face Diagonal Cheviot tailor-made, horn buttons, $4. Then follow $5, $5.50, $6 dollars, all wor gain company for and again at 7 to 1
lars are several grad sorts fur trimmed, and grand completeness is completed with Beavers, Camels' Hair, Bedford Cords, Cheviots with fur trimmings, prominent of them the airy, fluffy Moufflon, the range ranging from 17 to 31 dollars.

Among these garments are many specialties that will justify careful study.

Long Capes.

Our own and various imported, fine, tailor-made, of every proper stuff and every ought-to-be color, at every reasonable price from 10 to 100 dollars.

The assurance of justified success demands for this stock of Women's Wraps and Jackets a confidence strong as words can express.

The groom is of no account at a wedding. Who cares for his clothes? Everybody is interested in the bride, and the first question is, "How was she dressed?" Her garb is of universal interest. This dress distinction runs through life.

On the clothes line men and boys are inane. That's why there is no literature of Clothing advertising. It's all stupid —most of it much more doltish than ours. If other is worth reading, ours more. The same of the clothes, ours are more worthy your interested attention.

For Men:

- Another lot of the popular Black Cheviot Suits, with double-breasted Sacks, at $15.
- Black Diagonal (Clay's weave) Cutaway or Sack Suit, $15.00.
- Fine Black Diagonal (Clay's weave) Coat and Vest, $15, Striped Trousers, $5.
- Fine Nellesen Crepe Suit, (cutaway), $28; (Prince Albert), $30.
- Brown Homespun Suits at $15 and $16.50 are quick sellers.
- Black and Blue Homespuns, very rough (and scarce they say), $26, Double and Single-breasted Sacks.
- In Men's Fine Overcoats, winter weights, the top-notch of fine tailoring is in Carr's Treble Meltons at $40 and $45.
- Fine English Kersey Overcoats, extra long, $35.
- Nobby Overcoats of light color English Kersey, full back, strapped seams, cassimere and silk lined, at $32.50.
- Popular Overcoats of fine Worumbo Kersey in black, blue, green and brown, cassimere and silk lined; double-breasted, $20; single-breasted, $18.
- All-wool Cheviot Trousers, $2.50.
- Cashmere Vests, double-breasted, $2.50.

Boys as clothes wearers are more interesting than men. The Father that pays, the Mother that selects, the Boy that wears, all have some interest—but the girl beats him.

The Boys' Clothing business is at the top here.

The place the Clothes are sold in is the brightest and best.
The largest service for the least money.
The greatest Style for the least money.
The biggest Variety for every taste.

These are the elementary principles of our Boys' Clothing business—and Men's too.

For Small Boys:

- Excellent Scotch style Kersey Suits for small Boys are marvels of cheapness at $3.50.
- Jersey Suits, blue and black, $4 to $8.50.
- Three-piece Vest Suits, loop and button at top, $5 to $12.
- Reefers, blue, brown, or drab, $4 to $12.
- Overcoats with or without cape, $5 to $15.

For Large Boys:

- Suits, double or single-breasted Blouse, $3 to $15.
- Three-piece Vest Suits, $5.75 to $15.
- Overcoats, single or double-breasted, plain or fancy lined, with or without Cape, $5 to $20.

For Larger Boys:

- Homespuns, Cheviots, plain-faced Cassimeres and Whipcord Suits, $7.50 to $22.
- Overcoats, smooth-faced Melton, $5; better grade of Melton, blue or brown, $7.50; London Smoke Kersey, $10; blue, brown, or drab Kersey, $13.50, $15, $18 and $20.

— James A. Kelley, the wholesale and retail liquor merchant at Tenth and Shipley streets, Wilmington, has one of the finest decorated sample rooms in the city. His establishment is but one square from the Court House. The decoration is the work of an Italian artist and is handsome.

— Two hundred and fifty persons attended the entertainment of the Young Ladies' Guild of St. Anne's Church, in the Opera House last Friday night. The Middletown orchestra furnished the music. The affair netted $40. A tableaux, eight "pictures from life" and three charades were effectively given by local talent.

— These are the averages of the scholars of Summit Bridge public schools as prepared by the teacher, Miss Vinie Lynch: John Fisher, 100; Bessie Fisher, 100; Fannie Crouch, 100; Leslie Carnagy, 100; Sewell Downs, 100; Bessie Money, 99; Rachel Bendler, 98; Boys Salmons, 96; Josie Salmons, 95; Colonel Crouch, 94; Herman Bendler, 94; Ruth Alrich, 90.

— The annual meeting of the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary societies of the New Castle Presbytery began yesterday in the Delaware City Presbyterian Church and will end to-night. The Middletown delegates are Miss Mary Dunning from the Penny Gleaners of the Forest Church, Mrs. Edward Reynolds from the Home society and Mrs. Charles Derrickson from the Foreign society. Mrs. Heaton, Miss Tillie Murphey and Miss Sadie Howell of Middletown, are also present.

Teachers Institute.

The seventeenth annual session of the New Castle County Teachers' Institute, which will be held in the Middletown Opera House beginning Tuesday November 17 and ending on the following Friday, promises to be the most successful ever held. Superintendent Griffin has arranged an unusually attractive program. A typographical error last week made THE TRANSCRIPT say that the session would begin on November 27.

The five-year-old brown pacing stallion, Saladin, record 2.20½, owned by James B. Green of Wilmington, is an inveterate tobacco chewer. The animal takes the weed from his trainer's pockets whenever the latter hangs his clothes near the racer, and whinnies for more after consuming the visible supply.

May Recover his Sight.

Eight years ago colored William Bartlett, of Middletown, was suddenly stricken blind by the nerves of his eyes becoming paralyzed. He has five children, but has never seen any of the group. He can instinctively distinguish night from day and oculists tell him there is hope for the recovery of his sight. It has been suggested that a fund be subscribed to pay for an operation upon the sightless man, who is 48 years old, and this may soon be started.

Produce Men Protest.

Nothing was shipped on the market train from Middletown on Tuesday. Philadelphia produce men located along the Delaware river front are protesting against the efforts of the Pennsylvania Railroad to land all Southern fruit and produce, the Delaware market train shipments included, at the new Thirtieth and Market streets market house instead of at the Dock street station. A committee of the dealers called upon General Freight Agent Joyce on Tuesday, but he referred them to General Agent Latta and a conference with the latter official will soon be held.

Thanksgiving Entertainment.

The usual Thanksgiving entertainment will be given in the Opera House, under the direction of the ladies of the Mite Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church on Thursday evening, November 26. All former efforts will be excelled in producing the greatest amount of fun ever given by home talent. Many prominent citizens, lawyers, judges, physicians and professors will don the quaint costumes of "ye olden time" in impersonating the boys and girls of the "Old Fashioned Deestrict Skewl."

BIGGS—MASSEY.

THE NUPTIALS OF ATTORNEY-G[illegible] AL BIGGS AND RACHEL V. MASSEY AT DOVER.

The wedding of Rachel V. Massey, eldest daughter of World's Fair Commissioner George V. Massey, and Attorney-General John Biggs was quietly solemnized at the residence of the bride's parents on King street, Dover, at noon Saturday. The bride and groom are on a ten days northern tour.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. F. Stonecipher, pastor of the Presbyterian Church. Miss Anna Massey, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Misses Mame Anderson of Latrobe, Pa., and Belle Howe of Philadelphia, were bridesmaids. Charles W. McFee of Georgetown, private secretary to Senator Gray, was best man and Robert Massey, brother of the bride, and George A. Elliott of Wilmington, were ushers.

The bride wore a gown of white faille silk, en train, elegantly embroidered with chiffon trimming and with long tulle veil. Nile green faille silk with chiffon trimmings were the elaborate costumes of the maid of honor and bridesmaids and each carried a large bouquet of La France roses tied with Nile green ribbon. Cut flowers and tropical plants decorated the parlor. Mr. and Mrs. Biggs boarded a special train at 1.40 P. M. and went to Philadelphia where they took the 4 P. M. train for New York.

The guests included ex-Governor and Mrs. B. T. Biggs, Governor Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Biggs, Sewell C. Biggs, Abraham Biggs, J. Frank Biggs, Mr. and Mrs. James Woodal, Chief Justice Comegys, Judges J. W. Houston and C. M. Cullen, Deputy Attorney-General and Mrs. Thomas Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Wilson, Vice President Green, Superintendent H. F. Kenney of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Superintendent and Mrs. R. L. Holliday, Bradford Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Pennewill, William Pennewill, Miss Mame Jones, George Massey Jones, James Pennewill, Thomas Bartlett and Joseph R. Whitaker. Caterer Jones of Wilmington, served luncheon.

The wedding tour will embrace the New England states and Niagara Falls. Mr. and Mrs. Biggs will reside in Wilmington.

I was a resident of Baltimore but have moved to Middletown, and am prepared to do all kinds of Dressmaking. I invite my friends and public general to call and give me a trial. Next to the town hall. Miss Emma Lawrence, Middletown, Del.

St. Georges Complaints.

MR. EDITOR:—It is not the object nor the pleasure of your correspondent to be public censor, nor does he wish to publish the shame of the town, but the time has arrived when forbearance ceases to be a virtue and it is necessary to speak plainly. The way the public affairs have been mismanaged here is a disgrace to any civilized commmunity and if there is not an uprising at the polls at the next town election it will be because the "ring" has more followers than there are self-respecting citizens.

For some months the street lighting has been miserable, but the past few weeks have eclipsed even the preceding period. On several dark, stormy nights the lamps were not lighted at all, yet they were most needed on those nights, and when they were lighted they invariably burned out before 11 o'clock and some as early as 10 o'clock. The excuse the town bailiff gives is that the committee of council allows him but a certain amount of oil per night and it is not sufficient to keep the lamps burning later. If the Town Council can not afford to furnish more oil, then it would be far better to abolish the street lighting business altogether and save the taxpayers the expense of a useless system.

Again—The street commitee expended a large sum of money for terra cotta pipes which were distributed to the points where they were to be placed in position two months ago. Not one of them has been laid and the result is that to-day not a dozen can found in the town that are in a condition to be used, almost the entire number being broken.

This same committee has shamefully neglected to repair public crossings while they have been busily repairing the sidewalks fronting their own properties, one of the committee doing some of the brick-laying himself. Good pavements have been torn up and relaid and those needing repairs have been neglected. Work upon the street crossing across Delaware avenue from the creamery to the post-office was abandoned seven weeks ago when it was about half-finished, and there it remains as it was then. The old crossing would have answered better than the single plank does now.

However, I will not occupy more of your space in this issue, but unless there is a change for the better [illegible] of our town officials will hea[illegible] again. Very[illegible]

Methinks I should not fear my crown to lose.

A solemn silence reigned on all around,
E'en Nature's voices uttered not a sound;
The coming shadow seemed to cease to fall,
And sleep upon my heavy spirit fell.

A moment's pause, and then a heavenly light
Beamed full upon my wondering, raptured sight;
Angels on silvery wings seemed everywhere,
And angel's voices filled the balmy air.

Thro' one more pair than all the rest to see,
One to whom all others bowed the knee,
Came gently to me, as I trembling lay,
And "follow me," He said, "I am the way."

Thus he led me far above,
Beneath a canopy of love,
...ve and size were seen,
...than my own had been.
...most beauteous to be...

...ength to Him I raised my saddened heart,
Who knew its sorrows, bid its doubts depart;
"Be not afraid," said He, "but trust me,
My perfect love shall now be shown to thee."

And then with lightened eyes and willing feet,
Again I turned, my earthly cross to meet
With forward footsteps, turning not aside,
For fear some hidden coil might me betide.

And then in the prepared, appointed way,
Listening to hear, and ready to obey—
A cross I quickly found, of plainest form,
With only words of love inscribed thereon.

With thankfulness, I raised it from the rest,
And joyfully acknowledged it the best—
The only one of all the many there
That I could feel, was good for me to bear.

And while I thus my chosen one confessed,
I saw a Heavenly brightness on it rest;
And as I bent, my burden to sustain,
I recognized my own old cross again.

Oh! how different did it seem to be
Now I had learned its preciousness to see;
No longer could I unbelieving say,
"Perhaps another is a better way."

Oh! no, henceforth my own desire shall be
That He who knows me best should choose for me;
As so, whate'er His love sees good to send,
We'll trust it's best because He knows the end.

M'CLELLAN AS A RIDER.

HE WAS ONE OF THE HANDSOMEST MEN ON HORSEBACK IN THE FEDERAL SERVICE.

Major General George B. McClellan was one of the handsomest men on horseback in the Federal service. He sat in the saddle with a grace and ease peculiarly his own. All his appointments were in the most correct taste, and his horses were full blooded animals Wearing highly polished riding boots coming up nearly to his hips, and wrinkled from the instep to the knee, he would go splashing over the roads until horse, rider and boots were covered with Virginia mud, probably the stickiest substance in existence. His servant, too, always had a clean pair of boots for the general on his return to quarters, after which the man would spend a couple of hours cleaning the other pair. The soldiers at Yorktown used to say that "Little Mac" could collect more mud in an hour's time than any other general in the army.

McClellan was passionately fond of ...rses and preferred to have them ...black. No other officer during ...ed such magnetism ...ee him ride by a ...pleasant experi-by my experience. W... I was put on the defens... ever extracts I saw from Am... papers told of some new fraud or defalcation, public or private. It was sixteen years since my last visit abroad, and I found a very striking change in the feeling toward America and Americans. An Englishman was everywhere treated with a certain deference; Americans were at best tolerated. The example of America was everywhere urged in France as an argument against republican forms of government. It was fruitless to say that the people were still sound when the Body Politic which draws its life from them showed such blotches and sores. I came home, and instead of wrath at such abominations, I found banter. I was profoundly shocked, for I had received my earliest impressions in a community the most virtuous, I believe, that ever existed . . . . In the Commonwealth that built the first free school and the first college, I heard culture openly derided. I suppose I like to be liked as well as other men Certainly I would rather be left to my studies than meddle with politics. But I had attained to some consideration, and my duty was plain. I wrote what I did in the plainest way, that he who ran might read, and that I hit the mark I aimed at is proved by the attacks against which you so generously defend me. These fellows have no notion what love of country means. It is in my very blood and bones. If I am not an American, who ever was?"

Something new in Pensions.

New York Standard, Oct. 28th.

From the report of Consul General Carr of Copenhagen, pulished in the June number of Reports of Consuls of the United States, it appears that the Danish government has recognized the truth of the familiar quotation, "Peace hath her heroes no less renowned than war," and that the worthy citizen who has worn out his life in earnest and honest endeavor to be useful to the community in his life, is worthy to be classed as a hero and pensioned, when he may no longer be able to produce those things that make his life comfortable.

One section of the poor laws of Denmark provides for the pensioning of worthy old men and women. Mr. Carr says: "Pensions are hereafter to be provided for the aged native and naturalized citizens, men and women, who have completed their sixtieth year, and are of good character, not having been convicted of crime, and who have not, for the benefit of their children or by improvident living, impoverished themselves, and who have lived for ten years, immediately preceding, without having received relief. All such persons are to be supported and provided for during their declining years, not as paupers, but as pensioners, losing none of their political rights."

It appears to me that there is as much more of the spirit or essence of the teaching of the lowly Nazarene in the pensioning by Denmark of worthy but unsuccessful laborers in the fields of commerce, as there is less in the pensioning and heroizing by other Christian nation of laborers in the fields of destruction.

BY THE BARD OF TOWER HALL.

"There's a good time coming, coming,"
We have often heard it said,
But in vain we listen for it,
As it comes with noiseless tread,
In its journey, even onward,
To the future different shore,
In Columbia's land of freedom
May it knock at every door.
With some comprehensive blessing,
In which all may take a part.
So that, in the home of freedom,
There may be no aching heart.
We shall welcome its arrival,
When ourselves we strictly school
In the precept and the practice
Of the Saviour's golden rule;
When an honest son of labor,
Armchanic poor commands
More respect than wealthy sluggards,
With their jeweled idle hands.
When a worthy man in homespun
Shall be honored more by all,
Than a knave in shining broadcloth,
Though it came from Tower Hall.
Where a Bard in songs and sonnets,
Says for Clothing all he can,
Yet believe with Scotia's poet,
"It is worth that makes the man."
Men of worth are always prudent,
And in buying Clothes so all
Go where prudence points to guide them,
To Mammoth Tower Hall.
